Ursula Dilley is a visual artist from the Appalachian mountains of Virginia, living in New York since 2013. She studied painting and sculpture at Savannah College of Art and Design, graduating in 2011. Her work is informed by her upbringing in the Bible Belt as a gay kid—she knows, loves, and is inspired by sex workers, criminals, and other apostates of straight society. She makes drawings, paintings, costumes, and soft sculptures. She currently serves as the visual director of PRODUCE Wrestling.
