

ABATTOIR

Caitlin MacBride

Caitlin MacBride is an artist based in Catskill, NY. Her work engages material culture and artifacts in an exploration of labor, desire, and belief systems. MacBride's paintings balance various languages of painting with the structures of utilitarian objects sourced from museum archives. MacBride has a BFA from the Rhode Island School of Design and an MFA from the Milton Avery Graduate School of the Arts, Bard College. She has shown at Thierry Goldberg, Fisher Parrish, Chapter NY, Real Fine Arts, Greene Naftali, Zach Feuer, Jack Barrett Gallery, Hesse Flatow, and Neuer Berliner Kunstverein among others. Her work has been featured in The New York Times, Modern Painters, Art Forum, New York Magazine, among others.

MacBride's paintings balance various languages of painting with the structures of utilitarian objects sourced from museum archives. In a recent series based on the Shaker community in New Hampshire, MacBride applied the exacting mindfulness of the Shaker lifestyle to her renditions of daily objects. The work examines the influence of belief systems on object making and the impact of object relations on their place in the world. In a most recent series, she relies on draughtsman systems of 20th century catalogues adopted by Marcel Duchamp to place her otherworldly renditions in the labor and craft context.

